The Control Plan is updated as the design changes, the process changes or measurement systems and control methodologies are improved. Control Plans are conceptually similar to

STRATEGIES FOR NEW PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT

new product development. Their indecision often arises from two reasons: they fear that a defined strategy may discourage innovation and they are uncertain how to formulate a new product strategy. The author of this article discredits the former notion and, in reply to the latter, proposes the guidelines for developing such a statement. As new products are essential to the continued success of
